CSE Alumnus's Startup Shows Tech Takeovers Can Happen... Even in Smaller Markets

Just because he's not in Silicon Valley or San Diego doesn't mean that CSE alumnus Matthew Der (M.S., Ph.D. '13, '15) couldn't work for a dynamic startup that would attract a blue-chip takeover. That's exactly what happened to Notch, Co., a tech consulting firm in his hometown of Richmond, Virginia. A year after CEO Paul ...

CSE ALUMNUS'S STARTUP SHOWS TECH TAKEOVERS CAN HAPPEN... EVEN IN SMALLER MARKETS

DATE: JAN. 17, 2018@7:30 A.M.

Location: UCSD

Held By UCSD

Description:

Just because he's not in Silicon Valley or San Diego doesn't mean that CSE alumnus Matthew Der (M.S., Ph.D. '13, '15) couldn't work for a dynamic startup that would attract a blue-chip takeover. That's exactly what happened to Notch, Co., a tech consulting firm in his hometown of Richmond, Virginia. A year after CEO Paul Hurlocker and Der's brother David started the company in 2014, Matt Der joined as Chief Technology Officer in 2015 after completing his Ph.D. in Computer Science at UC San Diego, with a focus on machine learning. His dissertation involved Investigating Large-Scale Internet Abuse through Web Page Classification.
